Dykes and Clibbett collided on the first bend in the first run of heat 1.

Heat 6 was a mess and the steward decided to call it void. Clibbett was trying to hold back a bike with clutch drag. He had not touched the tapes but as they went up he stalled. The others thought the race would be stopped and were just cruising but no red light was on.

By the end of lap one they decided the race was on and blasted into action but the flagman let them do another 4 laps at full speed so this made 5 laps in all!!

Heat 8 Trim fell heavily in a collision with Shepherd in the first run.

This was a good Cup clash but sadly it is remembered as the last appearance of Frank Charles.

Two days later Frank lost his life in an air crash, competing in The National Gliding Competition.

A brilliant rider at his best and 1935 Star Champion Frank had moved over to gliding as his major pursuit. After a spell on the sidelines due to a dispute with the Wembley management Frank made a welcome return to speedway action on 15 June 1939. He was getting back to top form when the gliding tragedy happened.

In heat 17 Goldy Restall fell. Dick Harris had no chance to avoid him. Harris broke his leg.

Heat 2 was a bit of a shambles. Restall was disqualified and his exclusion light was clearly displayed.

Unfortunately the black flag was shown to Statham instead of Restall and the steward had no option but to stop the race and order a rerun.

It was Statham's tough luck to fall when comfortably leading the rerun.

Attendance 16,000.

Owlerton had a new hard surface starting area to comply with new regs. The surface was tarmac. The local paper says that there was no consistency among the starting surfaces at the various tracks. Some were slick whilst others were grippy.

Dixon and Mills collided and their bikes locked together shortly after the start of heat 5.

In heat 1 Goulden had a most unusual incident. Well in the lead the bike reared up and somehow got away from him. Incredibly Frank kept on his feet while the bike shot away and crashed on its own!

In heat 9 Godwin crashed into the fence and fell. He remounted but had to stop. He was found to have fractured an ankle bone.

A rather one sided match was enlivened by Cordy Milne's usual brilliant riding on any track. He was not making good starts in 1939, often snaking for a long way out of the gate.

He regularly earned many points from the back.

The reserves Lee and Menzies gave the crowd a rare treat in heat 4. Battling for second Lee came down and Menzies took lightning avoiding action. They both remounted and resumed a hectic struggle for third. Lee got the place when Menzies scraped along the fence in a big last bend effort.

The Lions were through to the final 120/95 to meet the old enemy Belle Vue.

The National Trophy Final Belle Vue v Wembley was not held due to the outbreak of War.
