Wimbledon were in serious trouble losing heavily at home regularly. The Dons were hit by injuries, loss of form and some overseas riders not proving up to National League standard. Alfred Rumrich from Germany had not made the grade and Ronnie Greene hoped that his new signing American Byrd McKinney would be an improvement. McKinney was not in this match.

Before the match Clem Mitchell's eligibility to ride for New Cross was questioned by the Harringay manager Tom Bradbury-Pratt. Clem had already ridden for Harringay in an earlier ACU Cup match. The steward decided that Mitchell could ride because he was only on loan to New Cross. If Clem had actually been transferred he would not have been allowed to ride.

Heat 12 gave one of those heart stopping moments when disaster seems inevitable. Goulden was absolutely flat out when he fell with Lloyd right on his heels. Lloyd's evasion was unbelievable as he threw himself and his bike away from Goulden. A fantastic save by the very experienced 1928 pioneer.

Qualification for the Final was earned by scoring the most race poits in this comp. Both sides were aware that their opponents were the biggest threat in their group. They went at it hammer and tongs and at the end of the group matches Wembley were only 8 points clear of New Cross to reach the final. Heat 8 was a cracker. When Van Praag fell out of the lead Lloyd and Greatrex went by one each side. They then had a shoulder to shoulder battle that literally ended with the steward being unable to split them as they crossed the line.

Wembley needed 51 points to go to the top of the group and qualify for the final. They got them easily against Wimbledon who had a very tough time of it in 1937. The club was hit all season by injuries, loss of form and the retirement pre season of Vic Huxley who had been such an inspiration. Wilbur Lamoreaux was a superb replacement but somehow the team just didn't gel together.

This was Bluey Wilkinson's return to racing after several weeks out injured.

Abbott reared up at the start of heat 16 and crashed with Bishop. Abbott was out of the rerun but Belle Vue had no substitute available.

When Bishop fell in the rerun Dobson made a miraculous swerve to avoid him from close behind.
