MIKE WALSH

Mike Walsh returned to speedway racing in 1983 having previously ridden around the Northern circuits and training schools in the mid-seventies. He had made one appearance for Paisley at Scottish Junior League level, failing to score from two rides against Belle Vue at Blantyre Stadium on 1st September 1978.

He had purchased an old bike to have some fun in second halves and he was barely back on track when he received a call up to the Glasgow Tiger Cubs, scoring one point from two rides against Darvel on 6th May. He continued to ride in unofficial post-match practice races as and when his job as an electrician at Faslane Naval Base allowed.

On Friday 26th August, during one such practice race after the Glasgow v Milton Keynes match, Mike suffered a seemingly innocuous fall between the third and fourth bends after his machine appeared to stop suddenly.

He received extensive attention on-track from Doctor John Sommerville and St. Andrews Ambulance Service staff before being transferred to Glasgows' Southern General Hospital with serious head injuries.

He lost his fight for life on Tuesday 30th August without regaining consciousness.

Remembered as a pleasant, gregarious, hard working family man, he was a lifelong Glasgow Tigers supporter who wanted to experience the sport he loved.

Mike was 28 and left behind a wife, Janet, and three young children, David, Michelle and Scott.
