The Steward was J. O'Neill and the Judge was Major Gerald French DSO

The Judge's marked programme clearly shows heat 9 as a 5-1 to Wembley and the result as 67-28.

However, below heat 9 the Judge has drawn a double ended arrow pointing to the word blue written in the results panel and the following comment saying 'result of race was wrong' and countersigned the comment. It does not indicate the 'correct score' for the race, the date the comment was added nor carry any amendments to his programme. The Judge's programme shows the result of heat 9 as a 5-1 Wembley and the final score as 67-28. The result in the programme for the following week at Wembley shows the result for 13.10.1932 as Wembley 66 Belle Vue 29.

It must therefore be concluded that the correct result for heat 9 was a 4-2 to Wembley and the final score was Wembley 66 Belle Vue 29.

Experimental technique used to start races as follows:

The A.C.U. Steward will start races when the riders are in line at any point after they pass the 40-yard post and before they cross the starting line. The two green lights over the track in front of the starting line, together with the lights on the posts all round the track, will signify a good start.
